Silver potentially appears to be attractive relative to gold

Based on historical long-term average (LTA) gold is relatively over-valued compared to silver. Gold silver ratio is at 83.90x i.e. 1.35σ away from the mean.

Why you may consider investing in the fund ?

- ✓ Traditionally silver has been used for store of value as it has maintained its utility like gold.
- ✓ Silver has a tendency to act as hedge against the inflation and rising dollar
- ✓ Unlike gold, silver's utility in industrial/manufacturing allows one to take exposure during the economic expansion or rise in manufacturing activity
- ✓ For last two years, i.e. 2021 and 2022, the demand for silver has exceeded the supply, however, the price has not moved significantly due to other macro-factors. Cooling down of these factors will bring back attention to supply deficit
- ✓ With increased adoption of Solar Energy and Electric Vehicles, one can potentially expect for structural rise in the demand of silver in the long run
- ✓ Gold-Silver Ratio currently indicates that silver might be more attractive for potential investors
